A biography of Perico Vidal, one of the most important Spanish figures in film who is largely unknown outside of Hollywood circles, "Big Time" tells the story of a man about town who never wanted to appear in photographs or the limelight. Vidal made his debut as Orson Welles's assistant on "Mr. Arkadin"; he worked with Mankiewicz on "Suddenly, Last Summer"; he met David Lean on the "Lawrence of Arabia" set and became an indispensable asset to him on "Doctor Zhivago"; and Frank Sinatra himself introduced him as his friend, the man who saved his life in Spain. Everybody knew Vidal. At his penthouse in Madrid christened the Vidal Inn by Christian Marquand parties full of celebrities went on endlessly. He lived life on top in jazzy 1950s Barcelona and Americano 1960s Madrid, soaking up Harlem, Los Angeles, Miami, Paris, Rio de Janeiro, and Cuernavaca along the way. "Big Time" both the book's title and Vidal's life motto is told by Perico Vidal and his daughter Alana, chronicling the life of a vivacious character and an incomparable era."
